"Perfidious Albion."

Among the many curious declarations made by Congressmen last summer, while they were taking a holiday on the great plains of the West in the rollicking manner of schoolboys in vacation, was that of Senator Chandler of Michigan. He proposed that the United States should seize the Canadas as reparation for the loss occasioned by the piracies of the Alabama. The same gentleman now seriously proposes to declare King Theodore of Abyssinia entitled to belligerent rights, and to allow him to fit out privateers in American ports to prey upon British commerce.

Senator Chandler's recklessness does not give a greatly exaggerated impression of the feeling of hostility which periodically, ever since the beginning of the war, has pervaded the minds of the citizens of this country toward "perfidious Albion." Just now there is a marked recurrence of this unfriendly feeling. The Alabama claims constitute an ever-present cause of irritation, and as often as Lord Stanley and Secretary Seward have a little spurt of correspondence and the public is made aware that it has resulted in nothing the popular mind becomes inflamed with almost the wrath excited by the Mason and Slidell affair of 1861. Just now there is an unfortunate concurrence of other circumstances that adds to the violence of this indignation. The alleged illegal proceedings on the part of the British government toward American citizens who have been arrested in England and Ireland increase ten-fold the already intense hostility of our naturalized fellow-citizens. Everything that has occurred to mollify the passions of the two nations, now takes a new aspect to suit the bellicose spirit of the hour. The speech made by Earl Russell, a few months ago, at the dinner given to William Lloyd Garrison, was as oil upon troubled waters, for it was regarded as a formal recantation of the errors he had committed while acting the part of accessory to Jefferson Davis in the capacity of Her Majesty's Secretary for Foreign Affairs. But the English Anti-Slavery Reporter now explains that his Lordship meant nothing at all but to be polite to Mr. Garrison and to acknowledge his satisfaction with the course pursued by Mr. Lincoln, viewing that course in the light of events that had occurred since the close of the war. Again, Rev. Newman Hall of London is now speaking in this country for the express purpose of allaying the sentiments of jealousy and hatred which are always more or less active in the minds of Americans and Englishmen toward each other. He has assured us that the sympathy which his government seemed to feel for the South was unreal, and that the great mass of the people always had been friendly to the North. Mr. Hall has surprised every audience before which he has appeared by the apparently conclusive evidence adduced to show the earnestness with which the English lower and middle classes desired the triumph of the North and Liberty. There was beginning to be a well-defined feeling of chagrin that the shrewd Yankee nation should have been so stupid and so mulish as to doubt the honor and truth of so kindly and generous and confiding a personage as dear old unselfish John Bull. But just as the sensibilities of the people were becoming so excited by the pleasant statements of Mr. Hall that in another month they would have been ready to rush into the arms of their British cousins and beg them for the love of Heaven never to mention those silly Alabama claims again, thanking them for giving our illustrious Admiral Semmes so favorable an opportunity to display the pure and immaculate nature of American valor, Capt. Mayne Reid, the well-known English novelist, addresses the public through the columns of the Washington Chronicle and flatly contradicts the Rev. Mr. Hall in every one of his statements. He says that the unfriendliness of the English government toward the North was something very real indeed; that it still continues; that all classes of the people except the very lowest are in perfect sympathy with it; that it arises from the basest and most selfish motive,—a desire to see the downfall of our nation and of republican institutions, and, in short, that it is the most wanton wickedness. So between the novelist, who is a cynic and a Red Republican, and the divine, who is suspected by ill-natured folks of painting things couleur-de-rose because he wants to collect money for his church spire, things are left very much as at the beginning.

The National Bank Currency.

The great cause of dissatisfaction with the national bank note currency is the arbitrary apportionment, which deprives the greater part of the South, the Middle States, and many parts of the West of what is clearly their due, under the act.

It will be remembered that those localities which were so well situated as regards loyalty, State laws and an appreciation of the benefits of the new law almost at once assumed the entire amount allowed by the act—three hundred millions—so that for the large population of fully one third the number of States there could be no circulation granted, and we witness to-day the anomaly of the note of a broken bank being at a premium of two per cent., simply because the comptroller of the currency will allow the banks in the South, for instance, to add to their quota the amount of such broken bills as may be picked up, cancelling them as against the issuing bank. The result of this apportionment is that the banks in need cry out for help. Bank-notes they can't get. Greenbacks they may—and it is no curse to them if the other institutions do have their vitals taken out.

Again, these suffering banks are mostly located where there is a dearth of currency from local causes, such as moving crops and distance from monetary centres. Their profit does not arise so much from a circulation of their own notes as from a general abundance of currency which creates an active demand for money, and stimulates their own interior productions, causing a great call for their sight exchange in larger places—sending their products to depots, and thus exciting a flow somewhat unnatural, yet on the whole essential to any interior producing country.

This antagonism between bank notes and greenbacks must exist until one of two things can be brought about. Either a new apportionment must be made by which every bank shall receive pro rata according to its capital, or an increased amount of circulation must be authorized, which shall be devoted entirely to the uses of those banks now deprived of their proper quota. As the banking act is a national measure it presupposes an equitable distribution of its favors to all parts of the nation.

Up to this point all can agree. But here the views of expansionists and contractionists widely differ. A direct proposal to increase the volume of bank notes by another three hundred millions would probably be again voted down. On the other hand the bank men would as strongly object to an increase of the currency in the way of augmenting the amount of greenbacks. At the same time a very respectable minority, to say the least, would oppose any increase of either character, believing as we think, too, that either measure would tend to postpone the day of specie payments.

Some sort of compromise seems inevitable, and among all the proposed schemes we find nothing which seems so practical and feasible as a plan recently set forth in the Nation as follows:

If the national bank act is amended so as to permit any new existing or yet to be established national bank to obtain from the Treasury a corresponding amount of uniform national currency upon the deposit of the United States bonds, with the condition of paying into the Treasury one-half of the interest on said bonds so long as they remain deposited in the Treasury as security for such circulation, and with the privilege to the owner of withdrawing said bonds at his pleasure on presentation of a corresponding amount of currency in sums of ten or twenty thousand dollars, and of again depositing them on the preceding conditions, the following ends would be gained:

1. We should have a currency that would cost the issuer from three to four per cent. per annum, and that he could at any moment return into the Treasury. There would no longer be an inducement to petty cross-road banks to foster speculation by "keeping out a full proportion of circulation;" but there would be no impediment to banks getting all the circulation they need and can employ safely at six or

CHICAGO is the place and the 20th of May the time fixed for holding the next National Republican Convention. Cincinnati's central location and promised wigwam have been adjudged less attractive than Chicago's more ample hotel accommodations and more capacious building, and the same place where some good spirit brought about the nomination of Abraham Lincoln in 1860 will be the scene of the nomination of the man who is to succeed him after the Andrew Johnson interregnum. It is said that General Grant's friends have wished to take advantage of the great flood-tide in his favor by having the Convention meet somewhat earlier than the day actually fixed, while those of Mr. Chase would like to have had it postponed till June at least. If this is the case, the 20th of May was perhaps adopted as a compromise. Mr. Greeley was strongly in favor of Cincinnati instead of Chicago as the place of meeting, on the ground that the Convention should be held where the party needed the most help. Mr. Cook of Illinois answered that according to this argument, New York city ought to be chosen. This retort raised a laugh and finished Mr. Greeley's speech. The first ballot resulted—Chicago eight; Cincinnati six; Indianapolis, five; St. Louis, three. The second ballot was the same. The third and fourth ballots were—Chicago, ten; Cincinnati, six; St. Louis and Indianapolis, three each. The fifth ballot was—Chicago, twelve; Cincinnati ten. The vote in favor of Chicago was then made unanimous, and the committee adjourned subject to call of chairman. One correspondent says that at least three-fourths of the members were in favor of Grant.

As the time approaches when Stanton's case must be decided there begins to be considerable speculation as to how the matter will be decided. Within nine days Mr. Johnson must give his reasons for suspending the Secretary, and it is thought by some that the communication in which these reasons are given will be accompanied by another announcing his removal. It is asserted on the one hand that the Senate will approve this proceeding on the ground that the Tenure of Office act is not applicable to members of the Cabinet, and on the other that it will deside that Stanton is the legal Secretary of War. In view of the uncertainty which now surronds this matter it is gratifying to consider that however the matter is decided we shall have an official at the head of the Department who enjoys the confidence of of his fellow countrymen.

GEN. MCCLELLAN.—A New York dispatch to a Boston paper says it is stated that Edward A. Stevens of Hoboken is about building horse railroads in Paris, and has engaged George B. McClellan as chief engineer of the enterprise.

THE New Orleans Tribune, the organ of the colored men of that city, is of course displeased with Hancock's revocation of Sheridan's jury order, but it only makes this sententious comment: "Fortunately, Gen. Hancock's command of the Fifth Military District, however long it may last, will have an end, while stice is eternal."

UNJUST CALIFORNIA LAW.—Judge Niles, of the court of Nevada county, California, has decided that a negro cannot be convicted of crime, on Chinese testimony. It is California law that a white man cannot be convicted on a Chinaman's testimony, and the civil rights bill puts the negro in the political position of the white man; therefore a negro cannot be arrested on a Chinaman's testimony. And a negro arrested for murder of a Chinaman was released on this ground.

SPECIE PAYMENTS.—The following is the text of the bill "to raise the value of legal-tender notes to par," introduced in the Senate by Mr. Morrill of Vermont. It differs from Mr. Lynch's bill in providing for a complete instead of a partial resumption of specie payments in 1869 and in requiring the national banks to prepare for redemption also by holding the interest on United States bonds as a coin reserve:

Be it enacted, &c., That on and after the fourth day of July, anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, the Secretary of the Treasury be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to pay in coin all United States notes not bearing interest, and commonly called "legal tender" notes, which may be presented for such payment at the treasurer's office in Washington, District of Columbia or at such other places as may be designated of which public notice shall be given by the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 2. That hereafter, and until January first, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, whenever there shall be in the Treasury of the United States, after paying the interest and coupons falling due on the first of January and July each year, and deducting gold certificates of deposit, any excess of coin over and above the sum of seventy-five millions of dollars, the Secretary of the Treasury shall be authorized and required, and hereby is authorized and required, within thirty days from the first of January and July, as aforesaid, to sell the same in such manner as in his judgment will best promote the public interest, and may receive in pay therefor United States notes, notes of national banks of the United States, United States compound interest notes, or United States three per centum certificates.

SEC. 3. That all national banks having less than twenty per centum in specie on hand of their respective capitals shall hereafter and until July first, Anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-nine, be required, and hereby are required, to keep and to hold in coin all interest received on United States bonds which may be deposited by them according to law with the Treasurer of the United States: Provided, that this shall not be so construed as to add anything to the amount of the reserve now required to be held by said banks.

SEC. 4. That on and after the fourth day of July, Anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-nine, all national banks shall be respectively required, and hereby are required, to redeem and pay in coin, on demand, all their bills issued as currency of the denomination of five dollars and under, when presented at the counters of said banks, and all bills of a higher denomination, so issued and so presented may and shall be paid either in coin or in United States (legal tender) notes.

SEC. 5. That any national bank which shall fail to comply with the provisions of this act, so far as the same may be applicable, shall be deemed to have forfeited its charter, and the Comptroller of the Currency, upon receiving satisfactory evidence of the same, shall proceed to close and wind up the same as in other cases of forfeiture provided by law, and in lieu of any such bank may authorize new national banks, with an equal amount of capital, to be located in such States as may have less than their due proportion of the whole amount now authorized by law: Provided, That this shall not authorize any increase of the present aggregate amount of circulation of the national banks.

GREAT RUN AT BILLIARDS.—It is said that John McDevitt, of New York, recently in the course of a practice game made the unexampled run of thirteen hundred and twenty seven points, without once "jawing" the balls. A circumstance which indicates great amiability of disposition on the part of the champion.

ACCIDENT TO THE CZAR.—The reports prevalent two months ago in Europe, of the dangerous illness of the Czar of Russia, are said to have arisen from an accident which befel him while staying at Livadia, his Crimean summer residence. His Majesty was entering the dining room with his family and suite, when, at the moment of stepping over the threshold, the ceiling fell down. In another instant the Imperial family must have been crushed in the fall.

MASONIC.—At the annual meeting of Harmony Lodge, No. 38, of Gorham, held Wednesday, the following officers were chosen: John G. Watson, M.; Geo. W. Butler, S. W.; Samuel Dingley, J. W; Charles E. Jordan, T.; John C. Summerside, S.; Eli Morton, S. D.; Stephen Westcott, J. D.; Jona Hanson, B. F. Tyler, Joel Wilson, Committee on Finance.

MARBLE FOR THE POST OFFICE.—Twelve car loads of marble for the new post office arrived yesterday from Middlebury, Vermont, via Newmarket Junction. It is in blocks of various sizes, all prepared, each block being numbered as it is to be laid. It is of splendid quality, white, fine grained and well polished. Good judges say that this marble is next to the Italian in quality.

Political Notes.

It has come out in the House committee on appropriations that there is a deficiency of over $150,000 in the appropriations for the special committees authorized by Congress to send for persons and papers and to examine witnesses. There is also a deficiency of $15,000 in the amount appropriated for stationery for the House. The committee are taking measures to prevent any further unauthorized expenditures.

A woman whose name was found on the registry at Manchester, England, was allowed to vote for the liberal candidate amid much applause from the partizans of that gentleman.

Miss Anna E. Dickinson lectured in New York Tuesday evening, when she took strong ground against Gen. Grant for the Presidency, much to the dissatisfaction of her audience, who took occasion to cheer lustily whenever Gen. Grant's name was mentioned.

Navigation of Portland.

MR. EDITOR,—I understand that it is proposed to erect a "bug light" and steam whistle on Half Way Rock; the whistle to be blown in thick weather. A steam whistle in a proper location would be the best thing that could be placed on this coast.

In the first place, however, its position should be at Portland Head Light; thus located, vessels coming from the Westward to this port could get it to bear N. W. by N., and safely run for it, clearing Alden's Rock, Cow win Rock, and all others on port or starboard hand. Vessels coming from the eastward could bring the signal to bear W. by N. without any fear of "Bulwark Ledge," which would then be on their port hand. Should a ship-master desire to leave Bulwark Ledge on his starboard hand, he would bring his signals to bear N. W. by W. and then be able to run safely.

Half Way Rock is situated nearly ten miles to the eastward of Portland Light. Let us suppose a sailing vessel coming from the westward and bound into this port, the weather being thick, with the wind S. E. It would under such circumstances be prudent for her to run ten miles to leeward of her port, in order to take her departure for Portland Head Light. Should she go there, she would then have about ten miles to run for the Light, and she would then have the same difficulty in finding the Light as if she had not gone half-way to Cape Small Point, to take her departure for Portland.

In the next place, in sailing from Half-Way Rock to Portland Head, there is a strong current running in at flood tide, between Half Way Rock and Green Island. After passing Green Island it sets very strong towards Hussey's Sound, and the water there is rather too deep for common anchoring. Deep water very near some of these rocks. Vessels running for Portland Head Light have the flood and ebb tides upon their broadside. Sailing vessels would find it more difficult to make the proper allowance for tide than would steamers. Vessels approaching the coast from the S. E. with the wind from the N. E. are not to beat to the windward of Half Way Rock, and for steamers it would be unless to run nearly half way to Cape Small Point.

Again, it is better for large ships to go to Lambo Ledge a wide berth in any state of the weather.

If I understand rightly, the steam whistle is to take the place of fog bells. The fog bells at Portland Head Light, and at Cape Lights cannot be heard far enough to enable a fishing boat to run for them safely when there is any surf dashing on the shore. I have passed Cape Point with a light wind from the South East with fog, following the surf around the Point, and after passing the Point and not hearing the bell, would conclude that it had stopped to rest awhile, but on going ashore in the cove below the Light I could hear it indistinctly after I had reached a point between the sea and the bell. All fog winds are accompanied by more or less sea rolling in upon the coast, drowning the sound of the bells which at such times of course wholly useless.

I had a talk with the keeper of the light and bell. He told me that when he heard steamers coming from the eastward or westward, blowing their whistles, he would ring the bell by hand and by that means could make it heard at some distance from the Cape in ordinary weather. I went with him to examine the bell which is struck by machinery.

Fog-bells near Portland harbor are useless as they cannot be heard in time to avoid danger. The steam whistle, if placed at the two Cape Elizabeth lights, would be a very useful signal for our steamers plying between Portland and Boston. It would be the turning point going or coming, although masters of steamets coming from the eastward would not think it proper to steam to the Cape Lights to take their departure for Portland Head Light. Steamers could steer more accurately two courses than sailing vessels, as they are not likely to be swayed from their course by the influence of the tide.

Let any one take the chart of Portland Harbor and carefully examine the same, and think he will conclude that at Portland Head Light is the proper position for the proposed whistle. I believe a steam whistle could be heard from five to seven miles outside of Bulwark Ledge in ordinary weather. I have heard the Grand Trunk whistle, denoting twelve or one o'clock, at that distance. It will be seen that in coming from the westward or eastward or straight in from the southeast when the signal bears right to clear the dangerous points noted in the latest coast chart it would be perfectly safe to run for the signal at Portland Head Light. The nearer he goes to it, the more assured the shipmaster will feel that his position is safe, and when he arrives at Portland Head Light he is but a short distance from secure anchorage, in any gale we have on this coast.

I should be pleased to hear from the captains and pilots of the steamers plying between this port and Boston their opinion of the matter. I think it will be of mutual benefit. It will give more satisfaction to the people of Portland to have the steam whistle at Portland Head Light, although if there were a "bug light" at Half Way Rock, it would prove useful to small vessels coming from the eastward in thick weather, as they could then run from Seguin to Half Way Rock, and the steam whistle would be just what would be wanted at Portland Head to run for, and with such arrangements there would not be so many vessels knocking their rudders off trying to jump over Ram Island Ledge.

B. J. WILLARD.

Letter from Boston.

WHY MAYOR NORCROSS WAS NOT RE-ELECTED.

BOSTON, Dec. 12, 1868.

To the Editor of the Press:

Our election has passed off and the result has been telegraphed over the country. No doubt a great many will be astounded to learn that Boston, the cradle of Abolitionism in America the pride of Radicals and the jest of Conservatives, is to have a Democratic Mayor. Yet the fact remains and will doubtless convey to Andrew Johnson the impression that "my policy" is working wonders.

Now that the result is known a company of prophets rise up and chuckle: "Just as I told you." All our journals give us the reasons why Mr. Norcross was defeated, but strange to say, no two agree. It is not because the editors do not know, probably, but because they do not choose to publish the prime cause.

Mr. Norcross made himself very unpopular during his official career by unnecessarily meddling with what people thought did not concern his position; by assuming obnoxious independence, and by insisting on whatever seemed proper to him, regardless of the opinions of others. He made those who came in contact with him feel his iron hand without the slightest tissue of intervening velvet. His wealth lifted him above the feeling of reliance upon others, and his disposition, perhaps, tended towards arbitrariness.

I know that I am telling secrets, but as it is after the battle I shall not be considered a traitor. Probably there is no class of persons employed by the city that has not been made aware that he was mayor. On the evening of the election, before the returns were announced, in conversation with a sergeant of the police, I was not long in discovering that hopes of a change inspired the breasts of probably a large proportion of the department, though the officers were cautiously non-committal. A few minutes after I met a master of one of our public schools. He was more outspoken—the election of Mr. Shurtleff was then known—and remaked that Mr. Norcross was "pennywise." He added, "when we masters apply to the city authorities for books for indigent children we don't want to be treated as beggers. We derive no benefit from such benevolence—we don't want to be snubbed. He would willingly appropriate $2,000,000 for a Court House, but will scarcely allow any appropriation for poor people. The fact is," he continued, "Mr. Norcross slapped too many men in the face." There's the rub. It may be that he meant well, but he has been too particular, too inflexible in matters where such firmness was not called for, too well aware of the magnitude of his office, to be a popular man.

It is but justice to Boston to publish to the world how it happens that a Democratic candidate for the mayoralty slips into that position with five hundred plurality. Boston admires unswerving fidelity to the right, but, as has been demonstrated, condemns anything bordering upon usurpation. FIDELIS.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.—Zion's Advocate, for this week says:

We have no lecture to notice the present week, as the Mercantile Library Association have gone into the Opera business, and their tickets, if used, must carry the holders of them on to the debaitable ground that has so long been a stumbling path to those good people that venture on it. Perhaps next season the Association will inaugerate a first-class Theater; only it would be well to announce the fact at the commencement of the Course, so that ticket holders may act understandingly

This hint is well given. If the M. L. A. will take the matter in hand, and give us a "first class theatre," they will confer a real benefit upon the city, and be entitled to public gratitude.

GOVERNOR CHAMBERLAIN can but have increased the already very high estimation in which his literary ability is held in this city, by his address last evening on the "Surrender of Lee." The details of that momentous event are by most people imperfectly understood, and even the closest students of such histories as have described it, fail for the most part to get a clear idea of the preliminary movements which led to the consummation of the nation's triumph. But Gen. Chamberlain gives to his narratioe that lucid arrangement and that sharpness of outline which only an eye-witness can successfully attain. Only Cæsar himself could adequately describe the conquest of Gaul, and among all the men of brilliant parts who were found in the grand old Army of the Potomac, it may be doubted if there is another possessing the acquirements and the experience so peculiarly fitting to make him its historian as the man whom Maine has honored herself by placing in the gubernatorial chair.

One who has read the brilliant battle pieces of Victor Hugo may gain some idea of the vividness with which Gen. Chamberlain depicts the scenes which came under his own observation on those glorious April days of 1865—the patient march of weary but all-enduring men in pursuit of a foe that for more than four years had alternately fled before them or pressed their rear—the brief and comfortless bivouac before the dawn—the final dawn of victory and peace—the soldiers roused for the last time from slumber by a bugle that called them to battle—the thrilling dispatch from Sheridan to Grant, saying that he had intercepted the enemy and prophesying of "the great results of to-morrow," if support should reach him—the impetuous forward movement of Chamberlain's division in answer to this call—Sheridan's flag in sight—the filing to his right and the engagement with the enemy—the falling back of the rebels and the advance of the Union soldiers till the supreme moment when they looked down from the crest of the hills around the village of Appomattox, and saw in the ampitheatre at their feet the wreck of the rebellion. There was a fine touch of the better part of human nature in the speaker's allusion to an instinctive and half-unconscious feeling of reluctance on the part of our soldiers at this time of complete triumph to strike a disabled foe. But over the crest and down the hill they went, at no little peril withal,—their leader choosing to obey Sheridan's order rather than Ord's more prudent commands.—Then came the flag of truce and conference of generals. Gordon, well-praised by the historian of his defeat, Longstreet, looking grave and care-worn, but with a kindly dignity still, and Anderson are pictured to us, meeting to treat for a cessation of hostilities with Phil Sheridan, and to listen to his expletives. Then after fruitless conference and preparations for a renewal of the fight, came Grant and Lee and made the compact by virtue of which 27,000 stand of arms and 100 colors were to be laid at the feet of Chamberlain, rightfully selected,—maimed and battle-scarred as he was from recent conflicts—to receive the surrender.—No one who was so fortunate last night as to hear the Governor's graphic description of the formal ceremonial of surrender, of the gray-clad Rebels marching up and laying down their weapons all day long, while not a word nor a sign of derision or of triumph from their magnanimous victors added to the weight of their humiliation, and of that wonderful resurrection of a long dormant fraternal feeling between North and South—alas, too soon to disappear again—no one who heard all this will forget it sooner than he forgets how the Old Guard died at Waterloo.

The Governor was made aware of the appreciation of his hearers by frequent outbursts of applause at some eloquent passage or at some of the not infrequent touches of humor of which, in a delicate and scholarly way, he is quite the master. His account of an interview with Bombastes Furioso Wise was especially entertaining.

Owing to the prominent part taken by Gov. Chamberlain in the closing scenes of the rebellion, he could not, of course, avoid quite frequent though incidental allusion to himself in describing them; but he did so with all becoming modesty, while a man more given to self-assertion might well have said, pars magna fui.

THE WEATHER.—We are having a remarkably cold spell of weather for this time of year. In fact it has been colder for the last three days than it has been for a number of years in December. Yesterday morning the thermometer stood as low as 12 degrees below zero in some parts of the city. The stage driver reports that it stood 16 degrees below in Conway yesterday morning. At Skowhegan it was at one spell 14 degrees below. If it keeps on this way any length of time it will fit us all for a journey to the North Pole without overcoats. At 10 o'clock P. M., it commenced to snow, but the extreme cold discouraged it, and at 10 o'clock the moon was shining dimly, with the wind N. E. Should it moderate this morning and begin to snow again, we shall expect a hard storm, as it will be a continuation of the severe one that they had in New York and Boston yesterday.

CORRECTION.—By one of those annoying accidents which will sometimes occur in connection with the night work of a printing office, the name of Signor Brignoli was substituted in our notice of Wednesday night's opera, for that of Signor Massimiliani. The error escaped the notice of the proof reader; and we were thus made to do an injustice to a singer whose performance deserved all the praise which we meant to give him, but which the sleepy types managed to transfer to another.

SECOND UNIVERSALIST ENTERTAINMENT.—We would call attention to the advertisement of the Ladies Association of the Second Universalist Society for a Levee and Promenade Concert at New City Hall this evening. It will be recollected that this society suffered severely by the great fire, and being abandoned by the largest portion of their wealthy members, were left but a handful, as it were, of earnest striving, energetic spirits, who have struggled hard against adverse fortune to support the dogmas of their faith and have succeeded in getting a neat and comfortable place of worship, and have procured the services of one of the most talented ministers of their order.—They had procured the use of the City Hall for last Monday evening, but as there appeared to be a strong desire on the part of the public to have the opera troupe come here, they generously gave up that evening and now present a fine entertainment for all those who desire to pass an evening in social and cheerful amusement. If any portion of the community deserve the favorable consideration of the public, it is the ladies of this society.

TIMELY INFORMATION.—One of Portland's people, whose name we suppress on account of his relatives and friends, in coming from the East on the St. John boat, last week, and being considerably hungry, thought that he would take that opportunity to lay in a supply for a week or so. He commenced to call for beefsteaks, oysters, roast turkey, &c., and with his excellent appetite and continued calling, rather astonished the waiter who began to show signs of uneasiness. The gentleman of the appetite, probably thinking it would need some explanation with his next order, informed the waiter that he had to pay a dollar for his dinner, and that he was bound to have his money's worth. The cloud left the waiter's face at once and he hastily informed our esteemed citizen that he need'nt punish himself any longer on that account for he had reached that point some time before. It is needless to say that the gentleman came out from behind the pile of turkey bones and remnants of beef-steak at once. Portland has reason to thank this waiter for his safe return to our city.

SMASH UP.—A man, who resides in Westbrook, drove up to a store on Exchange street yesterday afternoon, and after making a hitching post of another man's wagon, stepped into the store to do some business. The owner of the first wagon came out, got aboard his own conveyance and drove off—the other horse following of course. On passing the office of the Canadian Express Company, the hind horse, on account of the manner in which he was led, ran into one of the teams of this Company, clearing himself from the wagon after breaking both shafts. The horse owned by the Express Company received a heavy blow on his chest by this operation, but whether they can claim any damages, if their horse is seriously injured, is a question we cannot answer until we know how much of the street they are allowed to obstruct.

ARRIVAL OF STEAMER.—Steamship Belgian, Capt. Graham, from Liverpool Nov. 29th, arrived at this port at 10 o'clock Wednesday evening, with 14 cabin and 163 steerage passengers. On the 5th, in lat. 50, lon. 44, passed steamship Nova Scotian, bound East. On the 9th, passed a steamship, name unknown, steering East, in lat. 43, lon. 60. We are indebted to the purser of the ship for Liverpool and London papers.

The Austrian, a new steamer, is the one due at this port next week.

FIRE.—A large quantity of fat that had been spilled on the floor of an eating house under C. F. Corry's apothecary store on Fore street, caught fire yesterday morning about 8 o'clock and the flames shooting through a crevice in the upper floor communicated with some rubbish in Mr. Corry's establishment. Mr. Corry had just opened his store, and with the assistance of his friends succeeded in keeping the flames down until the arrival of the engines when the fire was quickly extinguished without having done much damage.

PRESENTATION.—Mr. Nathaniel Whitney, boss carpenter of the Woodman Block, was last evening made the recipient of a splendid family Bible, presented by the carpenters who worked under him on that building. The presentation was made at his house by Mr. Perkins, in behalf of his associates. Mr. Whitney thanked the donors and invited them to partake of some refreshments. A social hour was thus enjoyed.

State News.

ANDROSCOGGIN COUNTY.

The mercury at Lewiston, Wednesday morning fell to 15 degrees below zero, a lower point than at any previous time in the season.

The Journal says there will be less lumbering on the Androscoggin this winter than any season for the past 20 years.

A Mechanic Falls correspondent of the Journal says: Isaiah Perkins is the only male inhabitant now living of the original settlers of this place. Thirty years ago we had only one dry goods store now we have five; then plenty of rum-shops: now we are minus such an institution."

The shoe business in Auburn says the Journal continues quiet. The demand for heavy goods is very light. With manufacturers of the better kinds of ladies' boots, work is now quite brisk. It is hoped that orders will be received which will warrant the employment of more hands after the first of January.

AROOSTOOK COUNTY.

The Presque Isle Pioneer complains of dull business in that vicinity. It says the travelling has been hard, and but few teams are fitting for the woods. There are four vacant stores in the village which a few months ago were stocked with goods. Lumbering, that branch of industry so extensively carried on in this State, feels the pressure, and from the best information it has been able to obtain it will be safe to say that not over half the the usual amount of business will be done in the woods this winter.

FRANKLIN COUNTY.

The Chronicle says Levi E. H. Farwell who was convicted of a felonous assault last Spring on a little girl in Jay, and was sentenced at the April term of court to the Reform School during the minority of his minority, has been sent back there to jail as too incorrigible for the Reform School.

In 1866 Josiah Emery brought an action against the proprietors of the Farmington Chronicle for an alleged libel. The gist of his complaint, says the Chronicle was that the defendants had published an article in relation to the "Johnson Convention," held at Auburn a short time previously, in which the plaintiff alleged the defendants had alluded to him as "delegate" to that convention, and as "having been a convict for crime and an inmate of the States Prison in Thomaston," alleging farther in his writ that if he, the plaintiff, had been guilty of any crimes, he had been pardoned by the lawfully constituted authorities of the country," &c. This action came on for trial at the April term of the Court in Franklin county, when the counsel for the defense demurred to the plaintiff's writ and declaration among others for the reason that the plaintiff admitted by his pleadings that what he charged as libelous was, in fact, true. The presiding Judge sustained the demurrer, and the plaintiff's counsel "excepted." The exceptions were argued before the full court, and were overruled.—Judgment for defendant's cost follows the decision of the full court.

KENNEBEC COUNTY.

The work upon the Methodist church at Augusta is nearly completed. The total cost of repairs, including bell and organ, will be about $8,000.

The Maine Farmer says that the Second Baptist society of Augusta have decided to enlarge their present house of worship, and the work will probably be undertaken another season.

A young man, named Otis M. Moore, an apprentice in the Gardiner Journal office, received a cut right across the knee and clean to the bone, from a skate, on Friday, while skating. He will probably be laid up some three weeks with it.

KNOX COUNTY.

The Liquor Agency in Rockland has paid to the city during the past year over and above all expenses the sum of $596 24. The sales for the year have amounted to $3046; expenses to $350.

Ancient Fine Aarts

Respecting the relics of porcelain ware found in the late exhumations at Herculaneum, which have been forwarded to the Society of Antiquities in London, whereof your correspondent says the battle resembling Drake's Plantation Bitters was undoubtedly placed among the ruins by the agent of Dr. Drake, we desire to state he is incorrect in every respect. It a bottle was found there bearing our lettering, the language of the Ancient Romans was different from the accepted literature of that day. Our Agent has other business than this in Europe, and has not been in Italy at all. No doubt Americans carry Plantation Bitters to Rome; but trying to impose upon a society of Antiquarians in this way, seems quite useless, and we do not appreciate the joke. It is unnecessary for us to spend money in Europe while we are unable to supply the demand for these celebrated Bitters here. Respectfully,

THE RIVERSIDE INSTITUTE.—This institution, which was incorporated by the State of New Jersey April 8th, 1867, for the education of the orphans of soldiers and sailors who died in the service of the United States, will be ready to commence operations in a month. It is located at Riverside, opposite Philadelphia, in New Jersey, on the banks of the Delaware. The building is now rapidly approaching completion. It is a large and substantial brick structure, surmounted by a cupola. The building is 125 feet in length, by 44 in width, and is four stories in height. There will be eighty rooms, with four beds in a room. Large porticoes are to surround the house; the building, when completed, will be a very handsome and imposing edifice; the ground around the Institute comprises six acres. On one side of the building is a fine grove where the boys can amuse themselves by various outdoor sports. and on the other side and at the rear there is sufficient space to raise vegetables and give the juveniles an insight into farming.

The Trustees of the Riverside Institute are Hon. Wm. B. Mann, Lewis R. Bromall, Esq. Hon. James M. Scovel, Hon. W. W. Ware, of New Jersey, Henry Gorman, Esq., and J. E. Coe, Esq., of Philadelphia.

The funds which have enabled the Trustees to purchase the property, and which are to constitute the endowment fund, have been raised through the exertions of the Washington Library Company. Such a noble cause deserves success.

The agency for the sale of shares and delivery of engravings in this city and State, will remain open but a short time, as orders have been received to close the subscription books (whether the shares are sold or not) in season for the drawing the first of next month.

PORTLAND DAILY PRESS.

WASHINGTON.

THE PRESIDENT'S REASONS FOR THE REMOVAL OF SECRETARY STANTON.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.

It is understood that the President's communication of reasons for the removal of Secretary Stanton, complains of his refusal to resign, and the defiant tone assumed by that officer, and states that the only law under which he could retain his position, was the tenure of office act which Stanton elaborately and emphatically condemned when consulted on it in the cabinet. He specially charges Stanton with being responsible for the New Orleans riot in not furnishing Gen. Baird with instructions asked in relation to the assembling of the convention, and in not communicating Gen. Baird's dispatch to him.

PROCEEDINGS OF LIQUOR DEALERS' CONVENTION.

The liquor dealers' convention met at 11 A. M. to-day. A national executive committee was appointed and empowered to transact all necessary business. A resolution was adopted favoring licensing distillers and taxing the sales of distilled spirits, the license to be not less than $250, nor more than $5000, pledging, with the utmost good faith, the efforts of the convention to promote the collection of a legitimate tax on spirits, and that their interests and the government's were in this respect identical.

TENURE OF OFFICE BILL.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.

The tenure of office bill will be tested before the courts as soon as the administration can find some one of its adherents willing to assume the brunt of a trial. It is proposed that in some case where the Senate refused to confirm a new appointee, the old incumbent shall be compelled to sue out a writ of mandamus to oust the former on his refusal to relinquish the office in accordance with the order of the government, which of course will be based on the action of the Senate. It is probable that this case will be made up before Mr. Stanton has been disposed of, as it will be intended to settle the dispute arising from his peculiar position more than anything else.

THE TAX ON COTTON.

It is stated that the Senate Finance Committee will shortly introduce a bill which has received the unanimous support of the committee as a substitute for Mr. Schenck's measure. A report will be given on the cotton tax bill in a day or two. Material changes have been made in its provisions, notwithstanding the pressure used to exempt the present crop. The Ways and Means Committee, it is stated, hold that a tax of $2 can be collected as easily and efficiently as a tax of 25 cents, under a proper administration of the law.

DEFICIENCIES IN APPROPRIATIONS.

It has transpired before the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives that there is a deficiency of over one hundred and fifty thousand dollars in the appropriations for special committees authorized by Congress to send for persons and papers and to examine witnesses. There is also a deficiency of fifteen thousand dollars in the amount appropriated for stationery for the House of Representatives. This subject was considered in a recent meeting of the committee, and in order to prevent if possible any further deficiency.

A BILL FOR RENT OF LIBBY PRISON.

The owners of Libby Prison to-day presented a bill to the Quartermaster's department for the use of that building during the time it was occupied as a military hospital after the close of the war. The gentlemanly proprietors don't charge anything for the years during which it was occupied by Union troops before the end of the war.

XLth CONGRESS—Second Session.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.

SENATE.

Memorials were presented and referred.

Mr. Sherman, from the Finance Committee, reported the House bill repealing the Cotton tax, and gave notice that he would call it up to-morrow.

Mr. Patterson, from the Retrenchment Committee, reported a resolution, which was adopted, that in the present unsettled condition of the country, contracts for stationery and other supplies for the Executive Departments shall not be made for more than one year, and that bidders shall have notice and allowed to be present at the opening of the bids.

Mr. Nye introduced a bill to amend the various acts establishing the Navy Department. Referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

On motion of Mr. Sherman, the bill relative to the proceeds of captured and abandoned property was taken up and debated at considerable length.

Mr. Drake's resolution was taken up, and Mr. Johnson proceeded to discuss it at length.

At the conclusion of Mr. Johnson's speech, the resolution was laid over until Monday and the Senate took up the concurrent resolution of adjournment over the holidays. After a short debate the resolution was rejected—18 to 20.

The Senate at about 4 o'clock went into executive session and soon after adjourned.

HOUSE.

Various petitions and Executive communications were presented and appropriately referred.

Mr. Eliot offered a resolution directing the Committee on Commerce to inquire into the causes that have produced the present depression in the shipping in the United States, and whether our maritime interests do not require remission of internal revenue duties on materials entering into the building of vessels, or some legislation to facilitate the transfer of foreign vessels to American owners.

Mr. Garfield suggested inquiry, also, as to whether the return to specie payments would not be valuable to the interests of commerce.

Mr. Eliot declined to admit an amendment and the resolution was adopted.

Mr. Banks offered a resolution calling on the President for information as to sales of public vessels since the close of the war.—Adopted.

Mr. Chanler offered a resolution directing the Committee of Ways and Means to bring in a bill levying a tax on crests and coats of arms on articles and household furniture in actual use. Adopted.

Mr. Brooks offered a resolution calling on the Secretary of War for copies of general orders promulgated by the several commanders of military districts of the South, and all special orders issued by them or their subordinates for the execution of the reconstruction laws or in any way relating thereto.

Mr. Ward rising to debate it, the resolution went over under the rule.

Mr. Getz offered a resolution directing the Reconstruction Committee to inquire, in view of the recent municipal elections of Boston and Pittsburg, whether Pennsylvania and Massachusetts have Republican forms of government and do not need reconstructing.—Went over.

Mr. Lawrence of Ohio introduced a resolution directing the Secretary of the Navy to furnish accounts of the expenses of the late trip to Europe of the Miantonomah. Went over.

Mr. Maynard offered a resolution instructing the Committee on Foreign Affairs to inquire into the expediency of providing by law that diplomatic and consular representatives of the government to Hayti, Liberia, and other ports of Africa, shall be selected from citizens of African descent.

The previous question having been seconded and the main question ordered, Mr. Chandler called for the yeas and nays on the adoption of the resolution, but the vote on the main question having been reconsidered, Mr. Chandler moved to lay the resolution on the table, and called for the yeas and nays, which resulted—yeas 63, nays 77. Adjourned.

THE STORM.

NEW YORK AND THE WEST—TRAVEL INTERRUPTED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.

A northeast snow storm has prevailed here all day with a high wind, and is still in progress. Travel on some of the horse car routes has been abandoned, and all are running slowly and with great difficulty. Travel in all directions is very much impeded, and it is feared that extensive disasters will result to vessels on the coast.

Reports from New Jersey, Ohio, Baltimore, &c., report the snow storm as very heavy in all directions, and railroad travel is either temporarily abandoned or very much impeded in consequence.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.

BOSTON, Dec. 12.

A thick northeast snow storm commenced at 3 o'clock. Thermometer 7 above.

VERMONT.

MONTPELIER, Dec. 12.

Among the killed by the Northfield disaster yesterday, the following are additional names: Patrick Galvin, Northfield; Cal Sweet, Huntington; Thomas Conley, Granby; Samuel Parker, Granby; Abner Darby, Alburgh; John Conley, Granby.

Stephen Horner, previously reported injured, has since died. George Randall, of Northfield, was in a critical condition last evenihg. The list of injured amounts to over forty names. The number killed is a little less than was reported yesterday, only fifteen in all having died up to this time. The real cause of the disaster continues to be the subject of earnest inquiry, and an inquest will be held to-day. It is stated by some that the engine became unmanagable, and that the engineer, therefore, was not at fault.

MEXICO.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.

An Havana special of the 11th says:

Dates from the city of Mexico to the 30th ult. have been received. The amount of money realized in the country, by the issue of bonds of the Republic, was small. As the Mexican people are again united and stronger as a nation the Government is about to take measures to improve the value of its securities. In the meantime the loans made by the late so-called Imperial Government have been repudiated.

The elections of all Congressmen who served under the Empire have been annulled by the national Congress.

The report of a revolution in Durango is untrue.

CANADA.

GREAT BILLIARD MATCH.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.

A Montreal special states that the fifteenth match for the champion's cue was played in Mechanics' Hall here to-night, between Joseph Dion and John McDevitt, of New York. The betting was at first ten to eight, and finally ten to seven on Dion. Dion led throughout, sometimes by 300 points. When Dion had made 1,295 McMevitt tied him, but the former again went away with the lead until he reached 1488, when he missed, and McDevitt run out with a break of 128, winning by 12 points amid the wildest excitement. McDevitt's runs were 113, 181, 132, 128. Dion's were 290, 210, 157.

EUROPE.

GREAT BRITAIN.

LONDON, Dec. 11—Noon.

The Times of this morning has another editorial on American matters, and particularly on the recent message of President Johnson. So far as the Times is able to understand the President, from the meagre report received by the cable, it has no hesitancy in counselling the acceptance by the American people of Mr. Johnson's views on the question of citizenship.

LONDONDERRY, Dec. 11—Noon.

The steamship Nova Scotia, from Quebec, arrived to-day en route for Liverpool.

SOUTHAMPTON, Dec. 11—Evening.

The friends of the executed Fenians are very active. From a great number of towns in Ireland come dispatches of mock funerals and other demonstrations of regard.

FRANCE.

LONDON, Dec. 11.

It is now said that the French Government has no desire to negotiate a loan as was some time since reported.

PARIS, Dec. 11.

The Moniteur of this morning says that the negotiations for the proposed conference still continue. There is renewed confidence felt in the success of the scheme.

RUSSIA.

LONDON, Dec. 11.

It is reported that Prince Gotschakoff has resigned the Chancellorship of the Russian Empire.

ITALY.

FLORENCE, Dec. 11.

The sittings of the Italian Parliament are quite stormy. The debates have recently been very violent, and the liberal members have assaiejd the ministers mercilessly.

It is thought that the Italian Chamber of Deputies will repeat their vote of 1861, declaring Rome the natural capitol of the Kingdom.

Sheep and Lamb Skins. 75c @ $1 00 each.

Calf Skins 16 @ 18c ₱ lb.

The supply from the West light, and nearly all the Western Cattle came in Saturday, some of the best lots were taken at a commission, and a large portion of the Western Cattle were sold on Saturday. Yesterday the trade for Eastern Cattle was quick, and most of them were sold for Beef. Prices, if anything, are a little firmer, and trade for good Beeves has been active. Upon the poorer grades we do not think there is much change. There were but few lots of extra Beeves in market.

Working Oxen—The supply was not large, but enough for the demand. We quote sales at $160, $165, $168, $175, $200 $235 @ $275 ₱ pair.

Stores—With the exception of Working Oxen and Milch Cows there was but few Store Cattle in market; nearly all the small stocks that are in a fair condition are brought up by the butchers to slaughter.

Milch Cows—We quote sales extra at $85 @ $110; ordinary $60 @ $80; store Cows $45 @ 55 per head. Prices of Milch Cows depend altogether upon the fancy of the purchaser. There is not a large supply in market.

Sheep and Lambs—We quote sales of 61 at 5c ₱ lb; 97 at $4 32; 50 at $3 00; 62 at $1 12; 70 at $3 50; 41 at $3 50; 50 at $3 00; 80 at $2 00 ₱ head. The demand is active, and drovers are getting better prices for Sheep than they have been getting for a few weeks past.

Swine—There are no Store Pigs in market, except those brought in from this vicinity, and not much of a demand for them. Fat Hogs—1,619 at market; prices 7½ @ 8c ₱ lb.

From the pen of America's gifted romancer,

EMERSON BENNETT,

Commenced in the

NEW YORK WEEKLY

No. 6.—Now Ready.

SOL SLOCUM;

OR,

The Maid of the Juniata,

BY

EMERSON BENNETT,

Is the greatest product of his transcendently great pen. It is a tale of the great border, and the characters which figure in it are as various as the many scenes through which they have to pass. One after another are introduced the hardy pioneer, the cunning trapper, the wily savage, the eccentric seeker after adventure, the tender maiden, severed by the force of circumstances from friends and kindred, the heroic and daring youth whose aspirations are lofty, whose soul is fearless, and whose deeds are daring, together with a miscellaneous crowd of adventurous spirits presenting almost every phase of human character, each of whom plays his or her part in the thrilling drama. The story is replete with scenes and incidents which cause the blood of the reader to leap with electric force, and constantly alternating between joy and sorrow, tears and laughter, indignation and admiration, he suffers and rejoices with the characters, absolutely seeming to act with them, so intensely is he interested—so deeply is he spellbound. The story never flags from the beginning to the end, and the love portions of it are especially beautiful, and such as to enlist the sympathies of every lady reader. This great story is commenced in No. 6 of the present volume, and those who desire to read it should send in their orders. Once more we say, buy the

PERPETUAL

BROOM.

NOW OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

Patented April 24th, 1866.

THIS Broom, although recently patented, and placed before the public, has already become the favorite wherever offered, and of the very many sold, we have scarcely heard of an instance where it has failed to give perfect satisfaction.

The head is light, its adjustment to the handle is so simple, that anybody can put it on, and a child eight years old can fill it ready for use.

We ask an intelligent public to examine this Broom, and have perfect confidence in their decision. The economy of this Broom is beyond any other, as after purchasing the family right the cost cannot exceed ten cents to fill it with broom corn. The broom corn can always be purchased of the manufacturer, or can be easily raised by the parties using the same.

AN AN

nouncement in which is made patent the assertions and facts undermentioned:

1stly:

The Subscriber having leased a portion of Smith's Pier (so-called) for a term of years, and having erected a very commodious and strong structure for the storage of Coal, designs filling the same with that staple, of which subject, more anon.

2dly:

In the selection of a scale I have been very particular, and have not allowed the matter of expense to act as an impediment, have chosen a "FAIRBANKS" of eleven tons capacity, rather larger than really required, but the platform of this Scale being not attainable in scales of lesser gauge decided my preference. Hence the choice. With this sized platform I can weigh any sized cart (be it city or suburban) including horses, usually or unusually occupied in the business, thereby gaining that guaranteed correctness, only procurable by this method. It would give me great pleasure to show to the citizens of Portland the delicate working of this instrument, and to my customers more especially, as being more directly interested, I would say that if they have not time to view their own coal in weighing, every few moments coal to other parties is weighed, and delivered, to which their attention will be solicited. The beam is so placed as to be viewed from the street; is highly ornamented, exceedingly useful.

3dly:

No. 266 Commercial.

The initiatory carcoes have arrived, consisting of the old Hazeltine and Schuylkill, a portion of which is eminently adapted for cooking, small stores, grates, &c. &c. It affords me pleasure to state that the cost, freight, and my own marginal profits, will enable me to offer the above mentioned Coal at such a figure as will amaze, astonish, gratify and satisfy the economical and prudent purchaser.

It is not at all improbable, is very possible, in fact, I state it as a fact, that in a short time I may present to the intelligent mortals of City and Suburbs, not the largest, but I hope and expect the finest variety of the above named staple ever presented for their respectful consideration.

Spring Twilight.

Singing in the rain, robin?
Rippling out so fast
All thy flute-like notes, as if
This singing were thy last!

After sundown, too, robin?
Though the fields are dim,
And the trees grow dark and still,
Dripping from leaf and limb.

'Tis heart-broken music—
That sweet, faltering strain—
Like a mingled memory,
Half ecstasy half pain.

Surely thus to sing, robin,
Thou must have in sight
Beautiful skies behind the shower,
And dawn beyond the night.

Would thy faith were mine, robin!
Then, though night were long,
All its silent hours should melt
Their sorrow into song.

Miscellany.

Quebec.

Mr. H. W. Beecher has lately paid a visit to Quebec, and thus discourses of that city in the last number of Mr. Bonner's Ledger:

Queer old Quebec! Of all cities on the Continent of America, the quaintest. It is a populated cliff. It is a mighty rock, scarped and graded, and made to hold houses an l castles which, by all proper natural laws, ought to slide off from its back, like an ungirded load from a camel's back. But they stick. At the foot of the rocks the space of several streets in width has been stolen from the river.

As we landed here, a swarm of drivers and a snarl of grotesque vehicles stood ready for us with bewildering officiousness. In New York, the hackmen at the landings make one think of Sherman's Bummers in his grand march, jolly, mischievous, impertinent, enterprising, and sometimes, it is to be feared, given to gouging and lies. In Boston, hackmen are put in long lines, as becomes Puritan hackmen, and thence solicit custom as decorously as if they were saying their catechism out of a pew. In Quebec, the hackmen seemed to be a cross between the mild French and the smart Yankee. Impertinence it was, or, rather, importunity licked into the shape of moderate politeness.

Away we went, climbing the steep streets at a canter, with little horses hardly bigger than flies, and, like flies, with an aptitude for climbing perpendicular walls. It was strange to enter a walled city through low and gloomy gates, on this continent of America. Here was a small bit of mediæval Europe perched upon a rock and dried for keeping, in this north-east corner of America, a curiosity that has not its equal, in its kind, on this side of the ocean.

We rode about as if we were in a picture-book, turning over a new leaf at each street! We were much pained to see some signs of enterprise, and tokens of modernizing some parts of the city. That ought not to be. A spruce modern house in good old Quebec ought to be regarded as an affront. The place should always be kept old. Let people go somewhere else for modern improvements. It is a shame, when Quebec placed herself far out of the way, up in the very neighborhood of Hudson's Bay, that she should be hunted and harassed with new-fangled notions, and all the charming inconveniences, and the irregularities of narrow and tortuous streets that so delight a traveller's eyes, should be altered to suit the fantastic notions of modern people! We were greatly comforted to learn that since the removal of the Government to Ottawa, the city is becoming stagnant, and is likely to fall back into its slumbrous fixity of odd and angular homeliness.

Our hotel was for all the world a second Quebec, in small, with a roof on. We could not find the front door, and when it was shown, we could not find it the next time; and when we got in, the entry was so narrow, and so dark, that we were under the impression that, after all, we were trespassing on some poor man's domain. Up-stairs we stumbled, by stairs that seemed intent on brewing accidents, and that squeaked and rattled as if they could not get over the fun of the last gentleman who broke his neck here; and at the top, we found ourselves in profound darkness.

It was sweeping day. The centre of the small hall was full of furniture; no lamp was lit; no door was open; there was no window, and nobody came to show us the way. In a minute more we should have shouted "murder," in the fear that we had been inveigled into some hole of danger. At length, the parlor was reached. Three stout girls were sweeping with amazing vigor. Leaving our outer garments, we began an exploration toward the dining hall. How we got there, or got back again, we do not know. The interior of that hotel must have been patterned on the interior passages of an Egyptian pyramid.

Pat and the Deacon.

Some months ago, as Deacon Ingalls, of Swampscot, R. I., was traveling through the Western part of the State of New York, he fell in with an Irishman who had lately arrived in this country, and was in search of a brother who had come before him and settled in some of the diggings in that part of the country.

Pat was a strong man, a true Roman Catholic, and had never seen the interior of a Protestant church. Ingalls was a pious man. He told Pat he was going to church, and invited his new-made friend to keep him company thither, his destination being a small meeting-house near by. There was a revival there at the time, and one of the deacons, who was a very small man in stature, invited brother Ingalls to a seat in his pew. He accepted the invitation, followed by Pat, who looked in vain for the altar, &c. After he was seated, he turned around to brother Ingalls, and, in a whisper that could be heard all round, he inquired:

"Sure, an' isn't this a heretic church?"

"Hush!" said Ingalls "if you speak a word they will put you out."

"Devil a word will I speak at all at all," replied Pat.

The meeting was opened by prayer by the pastor.

Pat was eyeing him very closely, when an old gentleman, who was standing in the pew directly in front of Pat, shouted "Amen!"

"Hist, ye blackguard! Have ye no dacency at all?" said Pat, at the same time giving him a punch in the ribs, which caused him to lose his equilibrium.

The minister stopped, and extending his hands in a suppliant manner, said:

"Brethren, we cannot be disturbed in this way. Will some one put that man out?"

"Yes, your riverence," shouted Pat, "I will do it."

And suiting the action to the word, he collared the deacon, and to the utter horror of the pastor, brother Ingalls, and the whole congregation, he dragged him up the aisle, and with a tremendous kick, sent him into the vestibule of the church.

The road is now nearly completed from Sacramento to the Richest Mining Regions in the Salt Lake Basin, and is being rapidly carried forward by the large st force of laborers ever employed by any Railroad Company on this continent.

Gross Earnings.	Operating Expenses.

This result, however, would have been far greater but for the inability of wagon teams to forward the freight and passengers from the temporary terminus in the mountains.
